1. [] called me the evening of 31 October 1961 to say that General Cabell had raised again the question of taking another look at Operations Policy Letter No. 6. [] said that the General felt that in view of the present lack of operational urgency, we should take this time to address ourselves to the question of coming up with a version which could be adopted and adhered to. For example, [] said do we assume that the 5 December 1960 version is still in effect, or do we now go with the exception made for Project [].

2. While I am, of course, loath to get into the whole matter in a vacuum once more, I do think we have no course but to take the opportunity suggested by the DDCI and get on with it. I also infer from [] remarks that the General has written this matter into his little black book for suspense against DPD
